

PAI 712: Public Organizations and Management

Spring Term, 2016

Tuesdays, 12:30 pm – 3:15 pm

Room 103, Eggers Hall

Instructor:	Jesse D. Lecy (jdlecy@syr.edu)
Office Hours:	Monday, 2pm – 3pm Office #320, Eggers Hall
Prerequisites:	None
Teaching Assistant:	Jaclyn Petruzzelli (jdpetruz@syr.edu)

Course Description

This course introduces students to the study of organizations and management in the public sector. It is a building block for subsequent courses in management and policy implementation. It covers key management competencies such as strategic planning, performance management, incentives and human motivation, team processes, and decision making.

Learning Objectives

Through the material in this course we strive to build capacity:

- 1) To lead and manage in public governance: Students will understand core competencies necessary for helping to shape the organizational environment (broadly defined) in which they operate and for managing individuals, groups, clients, and programs.
- 2) To analyze, synthesize, think critically, solve problems and make decisions:
Students will be aware of managerial tools and strategies and the conditions under which certain practices may be enacted for improving programmatic results and overall organizational effectiveness.
- 3) To articulate and apply a public service perspective: Students will understand how public, private, and nonprofit organizations are similar and different from one another. Students will know how to diagnose problems and develop feasible solutions through the application of theories and frameworks to “real world” problems.

4) To communicate and interact productively with a diverse and changing workforce and citizenry: Students will learn how to effectively summarize, appraise, and communicate technical and professional information, through both oral and written media.

This course gives students resources and knowledge to:

- Recognize important managerial and governance distinctions between public, private, and nonprofit organizations.
- Understand core competencies necessary for helping to shape the organizational environment (broadly defined) in which they operate and for managing individuals, groups, clients, and programs.
- Have awareness of managerial tools and strategies and the conditions under which certain practices may be enacted for improving programmatic results and overall organizational effectiveness.
- Effectively summarize, appraise, and communicate technical and professional information, through both oral and written media.

Course objectives are in alignment with The National Association of Schools of Public Administration and Affairs Core Competencies.

Required Texts

There are three required texts for class – they can be purchased from an online retailer and Kindle versions are fine.

Heath, C. & Heath, D. (2013) Decisive: How to Make Better Choices in Life and Work. Random House.

Sutherland, J. & Sutherland, J.J. (2014). Scrum: The Art of Doing Twice the Work in Half the Time. Crown Business.

Duhigg, C. (2012). The power of habit: Why we do what we do in life and business. Random House.

Additional readings will be posted through Blackboard or provided in class.

Assignments

The course will focus on material related to the internal workings of organizations – policies and procedures that managers and directors can directly influence. But attention will also be paid to the external environments of organizations. They must secure resources, appease external stakeholders, and compete in order to maintain vitality. More so, most modern public policy is accomplished through collaborations, partnerships, contracts, and other relationships with external actors. Management entails mentoring employees and creating strategic plans, but it also means administering complex external relationships and working collaboratively to define and achieve public policy goals.

Note, assignments will be submitted through Blackboard by the beginning of class. Late assignments are penalized (see the late assignment policy below).

Policy Memos

An important skill of an effective manager is the ability to convey information clearly and concisely. The case study memo and the elevator speech are designed to help students develop these skills. Both assignments have been an integral part of this course for many years and students generally find them to be useful exercises.

For the case study memos, you will assume the role of someone advising a manager on making an important decision. You need to make a recommendation to the organization based upon a strategy that you think will lead to success. Your recommendation needs to be informed by the class readings, the lecture, and your knowledge of the organization.

Three memos are due throughout the semester. All memos across all of the sections will be graded by the course TA, Jaclyn Petruzzelli. If you want to discuss policy memos make an appointment to attend office hours: jdpetruz@syr.edu.

Elevator Speech

You will be required to present an elevator speech on an assigned topic related to your case study. The instructions are as follows:

Similar to the case study learning objectives, you will be called upon by your supervisor/leader to brief them on a particular topic. Often, such a request may occur spontaneously between you and the supervisor while in the elevator, when you're walking past their office returning from a prior meeting, or when they request that you walk with them to committee hearings or to a meeting at another agency. The briefing they want is a succinct presentation of material on a particular subject.

This is your opportunity to shine. Reveal your intellectual, analytical, managerial, and communication strengths. Make the leader look informed and knowledgeable on the topic. Help the leader make the very best decision and/or recommendation possible. Remember, as managers your job is to implement policies and programs and manage organizations, personnel, contractors, and resources.

In this informal simulation you will brief me (your supervisor) and the class (my deputies) on a specific topic...The topic however should be one that you feel comfortable speaking about and which is appropriately complex and challenging. You will have approximately one minute to give the background context, and exactly 3 minutes to provide the briefing.

Elevator speeches will be given at the beginning of each class. You will be assigned a specific day – you are allowed to trade with another student if you have a conflict, but you need to inform me in advance.

The Self-Audit

It is important for you to think about how the material might impact you in your own life and career. There is a large body of research that shows self-reflection and goal-setting are important practices for success. The self-audit is a three-part journal assignment that allows you to apply ideas from the class to your own life. For the assignment you will use a set of readings to reflect upon goals, values, strengths, and routines that can help you achieve success after you complete the program.

Summaries of Required Readings and Cases

Each week the material is presented through 2-3 required readings that help frame a particular topic, and several cases that expand upon a specific idea or demonstrate the material in action. You are required to keep up with the core readings each week, and you are strongly encouraged to read or skim the cases before class. To ensure participation and proper diffusion of information through classroom discussion each week students will be assigned cases to summarize and discuss.

To facilitate dissemination of knowledge students will write an overview of each case that they review in the form of a short (approximately 1 to 2 page) summary of the important content from the case, and how it informs the topic for the week. In this way, students will collectively author a text that condenses the key concepts from the semester into a handbook for future reference. These summaries will be written using a collaborative writing platform at the following URL:

<https://www.penflip.com/jdlecy/public-orgs-and-management>

You will receive a list of your assigned sections and cases with instructions for how to approach each section. Each summary is due by the Sunday on the week the material is listed on the syllabus (two days before class). This gives the editor time to update the material before the start of class.

Grades

Grades will be comprised of points from homework assignments, two exams, and critical reviews of chapters in the text. The reviews consist of applying a rubric to each chapter, which I am calling a Campbell Score, in order to determine the internal validity of each study. Semester activities will receive the following weights in the final grade:

Elevator Speech	10%
Self-Audit.....	10%
Presentations.....	15%
Memo #1	15%
Peer Memo Review.....	05%
Memo #2	15%
Memo #3.....	15%
Reading Summaries / Participation.....	15%

This course uses plus-minus grading. Grades will be assigned roughly as follows with room for discretion by the instructor:

A	=	95-100
A-	=	90-94
B+	=	86-89
B	=	83-85
B-	=	80-82
C+	=	77-79
C	=	73-76
C-	=	70-72
D	=	60-69
F	=	0-59

Late assignment policy:

With the exception of reading summaries, late assignments are not accepted. Reading summaries can be updated throughout the semester, but late summaries can have a detrimental impact on your grade.

Course Policies

Academic Integrity and Plagiarism

Syracuse University takes academic integrity very seriously. If you are unfamiliar with the policies they can be found at: http://supolicies.syr.edu/ethics/acad_integrity.htm

Plagiarism will result in an “F” for the course and students may be sent before the academic integrity board. In short, it is not worth it.

Disability Statement

If you believe that you need accommodations for a disability, please contact the Office of Disability Services (ODS), <http://disabilityservices.syr.edu>, located in Room 309 of 804 University Avenue, or call (315) 443-4498 for an appointment to discuss your needs and the process for requesting accommodations. ODS is responsible for coordinating disability-related accommodations and will issue students with documented disabilities Accommodation Authorization Letters, as appropriate. Since accommodations may require early planning and generally are not provided retroactively, please contact ODS as soon as possible.

Syracuse University and I are committed to your success and to supporting Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. This means that in general no individual who is otherwise qualified shall be excluded from participation in, be denied benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity, solely by reason of having a disability.

You are also welcome to contact me privately to discuss your academic needs. Although I cannot arrange for disability-related accommodations myself, I will help you work with the Office of Disability Services at Syracuse University to support your needs. Please contact the ODS by email in advance: odssched@syr.edu

Attendance

Attendance in the course is required but is not taken and there is no grade assigned for attendance. Lack of attendance, however, can affect your final grade.

Computers and Mobile Devices in Class

The policy is to be determined by the class on the first day.

Classroom Etiquette

Treat each other with respect. Act in a way that creates an intellectually curious environment. Honor intellectual integrity of your classmates, but also be sensitive to views and opinions that are offensive. Minimize disruptions in class, especially tardiness, talking, eating, and text messaging. I tend to enforce the spirit of the law, not the letter.

Office Hours

If you have questions and cannot make regular office hours, please set up a time to meet.
